Cupertino Library Foundation Announces SV Stories-Video History Project

Reservations for participants now being taken for April 7th filming

MARCH 6, 2013 -- CUPERTINO, CA—On Sunday, April 7th, at Quinlan Community Center in Cupertino, video interviews will be conducted to capture the relevant stories of Silicon Valley, past and present. Reservations are now being accepted through <http://www.sccl.org/node/506946>

The Silicon Valley Stories Video History Project is gathering the memories and personal stories of local civic leaders and their families who have lived in Cupertino and the Santa Clara Valley. The goal of this project is to bring the past to life. These memories will serve as a source of information and entertainment for the community at large.

The Silicon Valley Stories Video History Project is made possible by the Santa Clara Valley History Collaborative, consisting of the Cupertino Library, the Cupertino Library Foundation, the Cupertino Historical Society and the California History Center at De Anza College. CreaTV will be filming the interviews. The interviews will last approximately 20 minutes.

“We are proud to record and archive the compelling stories of some of our most influential local residents,” said Mark Fink, Cupertino community librarian. “Through our collaborative partnership, we are able to offer this opportunity, free of charge, and are hopeful that this visual archive will benefit our community for years to come.”

Individuals who participate in the Video History Project will receive one free, unedited DVD copy of the interview that can be shared with family members and friends. DVDs will be mailed within 60 days after the event. In addition to the video interviews, Helene Davis of the Cupertino Historical Society, has pointed out that “stories...chosen from the archives of the CWA Collection, the California History Center (at Le Petit Trianon/De Anza College) and the Cupertino Historical Society....will be on display on the second floor of the Cupertino Library in the display case next to the CWA Collection through the end of June, 2013.” The display case features yearbook information for Steve Jobs as well as other local community movers and shakers.
